NUMBER 33.

Norway Post and Corps Entertain

Harry Rust Post and W. R. C. entertained a large delegation of visitors to their camp fire which was held Wednesday at the Grange Hall on Whitman street. There were 9 corps and posts represented including Brown Post and Corps of Bethel, G. M. Knight Corps North Waterford, Z. L. Packard Post and Corps of Hebron, W. K. Kimball Post and Ladies of the G. A. R., South Paris, T. A. Roberts Post and Corps of Oxford, and the Spanish War Veterans of Norway.

The day was a perfect one and upon the arrival of the morning trains the people began to arrive in large numbers. The buildings along the main street were decorated with flags which added to the observance of the day.

The dining room at the Grange Hall was set in festive array at 11.30 with ten tables laden with eatables of all descriptions, including meats, pastries, salads and all kinds of pies, cakes and fruit. Each table was decorated with bouquets of flowers and small flags. The large company was seated at the tables and a dinner such as the W. R. C. are able to prepare.

The hall over the dining room was decorated with the stars and stripes.

The afternoon exercises commenced at 1.45 with the following officers on the platform—president, Clara Jordan; color bearers, Mrs. Hattie Fuller, Mrs. Sarah Woodman, Mrs. Eva Fogar and Mrs. Addie Lovejoy; conductors, Mrs. Evelyn Young, Mrs. Kate Mann; musician, Mrs. Lizzie Brooks; press correspondent, Annie Bagley; past president, Mrs. Leona Tubbs; past color bearer, Mrs. Kate Cox; chaplain, Mrs. C. O. Buddon.

The program opened with a solo, "I Have no Other Sweetheart But You My Red, White and Blue," by Mrs. Eva Willis, past conductor of Huntington Walcott W. R. C. of Milton, Mass.

A. J. Stearns spoke on the loyalty of the men of '61 who went from Oxford county. He told of his wife's town, Lovell, now 23 left having the name of Stearns, five of whom were brothers. He compared those who stayed at home and those who fought at the front.

Rev. A. W. Moulton spoke on war and religion, and closed with humorous remarks.

Colonel W. T. Eastes spoke on the fraternity of the G. A. R. Remarks were also made by A. J. Holden, and the exercises closed with the singing of America.

The Campfire was a success in every way and great credit should be given the committee, Edward R. Kneeland, Frank Cox, and the executive committee of the Relief Corps.

The Deep Sea Fishing Party.

The long looked for day came at last when the fishermen of Norway and Oxford could try their luck at catching fish.

A party of 20 went to Portland on the early morning train, and then took the Perry boat to Peaks Island where there was an auxiliary schooner waiting to take them to the fishing grounds.

On the way out, some of the crowd began to shoot clams. About ten boats were anchored and the fishing began.

A number were caught in the forenoon. While the fishing was going on, the cook was preparing a fish chowder and at noon the party drew up their lines and began to eat with vigor as most of them did not get up early enough to eat their breakfast in order to catch the train.

After dinner was eaten they began to fish. E. D. Thurston caught the largest fish, a 13 pound pollock; also the largest number, 13 fish.

The name of the boat was Fannie Bell, Peaks Island. Some took lemons and tablets with them, expecting to use them and some did, as there were more sick this year than last.

The hungry fishermen got their supper in the city and at eight o'clock the train carried them back to their homes. The names of those who went are as follows:

C. B. Grover, Manager, W. A. Brett, Fred Perry, Carl Perry, Mrs. W. A. Brett, Mrs. Markside, W. C. Grover, W. N. Chute, E. L. Burnes, Lester Pike, Roy Wilkey, Grace P. Grover, Mrs. Annie Carson, Wallace Stone, Fred Cummings, E. B. Thurston, George Harlow.

Wiles-Schenk.

One of the prettiest home weddings of the season took place Monday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl A. Schenk on Pike Hill, at high noon, when their daughter, Louise Marie, was united in marriage to James Orey Wiles by Rev. M. C. Ward, who used the double ring service, in the presence of immediate relatives of the contracting parties. The bridesmaid was Annie Schenk and the best man, Currey Wiles, a sister and brother of the bride and groom.

The bride was handsomely gowned in white embroidered tulle, while the groom wore the regular blue suit. The ceremony was pretty decorated with white asters and sweet peas.

After the ceremony a wedding lunch was served in the dining room.

Mr. and Mrs. Wiles were the recipients of many beautiful presents including linens, cutlery and money.

The bridal party left in the afternoon for Naples, going as far as Harrison by team, but on account of rain stopped at Harrison, returning Tuesday, when they left for Frankfort, N. Y., where they will make their home.

Mrs. H. P. Booker and daughters gave a barn social to a few home on Marston street Thursday evening. A jolly party of twenty-six enjoyed whist and flinch until a late hour. The first prizes were won by Louis I. Gilbert and E. W. Ashell; the booby prizes by Mrs. L. V. Ashell and Mrs. L. I. Gilbert. Punch was served during the evening and ice cream and cake at the close of the games. The decorations were in pines, flowers and lanterns.

SOUTH PARIS.

Kelley, the Skunk.

The party who have been stopping at camp "Salem Inn" at the Lake this summer have become more or less annoyed by a skunk which after several visits became familiarly known as "Kelley." One evening Kelley called around in the small hours the night and visited a temporary ice chest; and by sliding a board poked his nose into a small cream pitcher and carried away the pitcher and all.

For some nights Kelley had not been heard and inquiries were out as to the whereabouts of Kelley. Sunday afternoon, a few days after his mysterious disappearance, a strange object was seen floating near the shore and upon investigation it was found to be Kelley with the cream pitcher over his head. Appropriate exercises were held at 8 o'clock, and his body with the pitcher laid at rest under a weeping willow tree, so Kelley has been seen for the last time.

Rodney N. Hall.

Rodney N. Hall, after several years of suffering from kidney trouble and a complication of diseases, died at his home at 8.30 a. m., Tuesday.

Mr. Hall was born in Paris, Nov. 8, 1838, and was the son of Ira and Phoebe Bumpus Hall. He was a Free Mason and member of the Wm. K. Kimball Post, G. A. R. For over twenty years he sang bass in the Congregational church in the choir composed of Mrs. G. A. Wilson, soprano; Mrs. Lizzie Chase, alto; and F. A. Thayer, tenor. He was the last surviving member. In the time of his boyhood he lived in Chandler's band, and was considered a fine player.

Mr. Hall married Justina Skillings, daughter of the late Robert Skillings. Besides his wife he leaves three children, Carrie A. Hall, Gertrude A. Hall and Fred Benson Hall, and one sister, Mrs. Charlotte E. Howe. Mr. Hall was connected for many years in the grain business with the late D. N. True. He attended the Universalist church.

Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Wheeler are visiting in Madison.

A Measure of Merit

Many Norway Readers Have Heard It and Profited Thereby.

"Good news travels fast," and the thousands of bad back sufferers in Norway are glad to learn that prompt relief is within their reach. Many a lame, weak and aching back is bad no more, thanks to Doan's Kidney Pills. Thousands upon thousands of people are telling the good news of their experience with the Old Quaker Remedy. Here is an example worth reading:

H. H. Gammon, Main St., South Paris, Me., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and have not the slightest hesitation in giving my name as an endorser of them. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me in a short time of a severe attack of backache and a soreness across my kidneys. Salmo Fontinalis.

Who shall dare to sing thy praise,
Hunter of cool waterways?
Who thy virtues may rehearse
In the manacles of verse?
Natchez of the forest brook
From Kootenai to Penasook;
Royal in the port and leading,
Humbly self-contained and strong,
Eye of the hawk, and speed of deer,
Fullest of the summer's grace,
Leopard's grace and lion's heart—
All complete in grace and power—
Thou art Salmo fontinalis!
Living rainbow of the stream,
Innate artist of the sea,
A gem of the water,
Humming bird and butterfly's daughter,
Flashing shaft from Pegasus quiver,
Meteor of the lake and river,
Aqueous bird of Paradise,
Ruby, diamond, pearl of price—
Words, availed, scarce do thy duty
Characterizing thy matchless beauty;
Gorgeous even in Nature's chalice,
Beauteous Salmo fontinalis!
When the blackbird woos his mate,
When the heron's neck reverberates
To the pheasant's booming drum
And the cicada's shrill hum,
Thy lover, scarce he calls thee,
Tracks the thicket, breast the hill,
Treads the treacherous morass,
Climbs the rugged mountain pass,
Brush the dew from brier and brake
Till he reaches for thy sweet sake,
Thill at last he finds thee,
Where the water fairly binds thee,
In the crystal of the cascade,
Loveliest Salmo fontinalis!
—(Forest and Stream.

An Arab Saying.

Remember, three things come not back;
The arrow sent upon its track—
It will not come to stay;
Its speed; it flies to wound or slay.
The spoken word so soon forgot
By those who hear it;
In other hearts 'tis living still,
And doing work for good or ill.
The lost opportunity,
That cometh back no more to thee,
In vain thou seekest, in vain dost yearn,
Those three will never return.

Fifteen-Minute Vacations.
Did you ever have a month's vacation in a place where there was absolutely nothing to do? If you did, you are ready to beat out the statement that short and frequent rests are the best. Indeed, there are many wise housekeepers who by taking 15-minute vacations every day and sometimes three or four times a day. "What can be done in 15 minutes?" asks the woman with nerves wrought up and face flushed, as she hurries from one task to another. "It takes every waking minute I have to get through, as it is, and I never could think of resting during the day. Why I can hardly spare time to take my meals."

Yet the lady who uttered these very words had time that day to tuck yards and yards of ruffling for her daughter's petticoat. What but nervous prostration is ahead of a person who reasons like that? A few of the things that can be done in 15 minutes might be named. A brisk walk, a nap or rest on a couch, a few minutes with a magazine, a hot foot bath, a cup of tea, a hot cup of coffee, a fruit or a cup of hot cocoa—any one of these things will rest and refresh a tired body and make the burdens seem lighter afterwards.

There are many other things that might be mentioned, but usually lying down with the eyes closed and every muscle relaxed is best of all. Mixed Marriages. The marriages that may be expected to fail in one between persons who are not likely to agree as to what is wrong and what is right. Marry in your own religion. Experience proves that mixed marriages in most cases fill the cup with wormwood and gall. As a rule people fight hardest for religion with the least like the Pole who was willing to die for his country, but would not live in it. Fond lovers may call this a hard doctrine, and we may wound their feelings, but nevertheless we are telling the truth, and the truth on this subject is mighty—but not scarce.

Don't put any trust in promises of no interference in matters of religion. Those fickle promises are sure to be broken, especially when children come to bless the union. They will surely then become the subjects of dispute and ill will. The father authoritatively demands his right, the mother claims her due and proper share—and the fight is on. Harmony between husband and wife is destroyed and the family is thrown into confusion and strife.

Reinforcing Button-Holes.

When making button-holes in the back of a lace dress or yoke it is hard to get them strong enough. Even when they do not fray they pull and stretch in an ugly way. The next time you are about to make try sewing fine net or chiffon as wide as the facing inside the hem where the button-holes are to be worked.

This makes three thicknesses to be worked through and it carefully inserted the inner lining will not show. Another way is to cut a double strip of fine lawn the size of lace, hem and baste firmly in place. Cut the button-holes through it. Work closely and later cut away close to the work. There is no possibility of showing with this latter method.

The Biddeford Journal says:—Don C. Seitz, who began his journalistic career in Oxford County, Me., but who is now touring in foreign lands as staff correspondent of the New York World, writes home to his paper that Japan is amazed at the jingo talk in the United States. He had a talk with the prime minister, Marquis Katsura, and he, Katsura, you can bet your bottom dollar that Don remained imperious, absorbent, undisturbed, thoughtful, suave, attentive, but never amazed. That's where he had it on Japan and the prime minister.

National Bank Roll of Honor.

What is called the "National Bank Roll of Honor," prepared from official reports of the national banks of the country, to the controller of the treasury has just been compiled by the Financial, a publication in Boston. This is the 20th year that such a compilation has been made and it shows that out of 697 banks under operation with national charters, only 1103, or one bank in six, is entitled to go on this roll.

To secure a place on the honor roll a bank must show surplus and undivided profits equal to or in excess of its capital stock. That is, assuming the capital to be 100 per cent, the profits and surplus must exceed that percentage. This is a severe test but not an unfair one.

The percentage of banks on the roll is not quite 17 per cent. Out of the 1163 banks on the roll, New England furnishes 98. Of this number Massachusetts supplies 60, Maine 11, New Hampshire 10, Vermont 5, Connecticut 13 and Rhode Island 5. The percentage of Massachusetts banks getting on the roll is a little more than 25 per cent, there being 197 national banks and 50 on the roll. The percentage in Connecticut is 22, but the rest of the New England states fall below.

Pennsylvania leads the country in the number of national banks, having 801, while the next largest numbers are found in Texas with 523, New York 438, Illinois 419, Ohio 375, Iowa 320, Minnesota 299, Indiana 266, Oklahoma 225 and Nebraska with 210. Maine has 77, New Hampshire 57, Vermont 50, Connecticut 38, Rhode Island 22.

A Four-Leaved Clover Party.

Clover Parties are always popular, especially in the country. A "clover party," you understand, is nothing more nor less than an organized hunt for four-leaved clovers. Unfortunately not every girl who would like to can follow this fashion, for the simple reason that she has no clover-patch at her disposal. If the number of guests is large, they should be divided into several squads, each of which will hunt, say twenty minutes. While one squad is hunting the remainder should be entertained in other ways.

The most successful hunter of each squad will be awarded a prize as a souvenir of his triumph; then the "prize-winners" will engage in a final hunt to settle the championship, and for a prize of prizes, which should possess some intrinsic value. For this nothing is more appropriate than a silver or gold pin in the form of a four-leaved clover.

The distribution of "booby prizes" to the unsuccessful searchers will do much amusement, if properly done. At such a party, needless to say, there should never be a hint of favoritism, or of making fun in any but the jolliest and best-natured way.

High School Preparation.

Undoubtedly a great many will be interested in the action of the trustees of the State normal schools who have decided that beginning with the fall term of 1912, no students shall be admitted to the schools unless they are graduates of a four years' course of a standard secondary school, or can pass an examination in the branches offered in the secondary schools.

This action will naturally be of interest principally to persons living in towns which do not maintain high schools, and there are likely many so situated, but the present high school tuition law makes it possible for any student qualified to attend a secondary school to take the high school or academy course without any tuition expense whether or not he lives in a town supporting a high school.

The two years' notice given in order that students contemplating the normal school course may have opportunity to provide for the required preparation.

A Roundabout Story.

Independence of thought and act is something that we all have an inborn craving for, even from the cradle; no matter how little we arrive at it in our mature years, in our weakness and cowardice.

A great-grandfather told Roundabout the other day of his little great-grandchild, who was playing with her Christmas presents shortly after the great day last year.

She was using them rather roughly and her "Gar," as she called him, sat watching her but not saying a word.

At last the little girl looked up. "Gar," she said, "why don't you ask me what I am doing with these toys?"

"Well," replied Gar, "what are you doing with those toys?"

"Gar," said the little one gravely and firmly, "these toys are mine and I am doing with them just what I please."

Odd Hat Pins for Morning Wear.

Stylish hatpins to be worn with shift waist hats can be made from button moulds covered with a network of raffia to match the trimmings on hats.

Others can be covered with scraps of silk embroidered with a close design in gold thread.

One girl who had four large bronze antique coins had them mounted into a stylish set of hatpins which gave a decided "kick" to her "butter colored and Panama outing hats."

Another girl utilized a pair of mosaic sleeve buttons, while a third converted two medallions of carved ivory about the size of a silver dollar into hat pins that no money could buy.

Added impetus has been given to the movement to erect a suitable memorial to the North American Indian in New York Harbor by the hearty cooperation of the various Orders of Red Men throughout the country.

Farm Philosophy.

It's a losing game to buy staple supplies in little dribs. The reason so many city people are poor is because they buy groceries and coal in five and ten cent lots.
How we admire the man who never talks about anybody or anything except himself and his own doing!
If your neighbor comes along and offers to let you in on a grand old gold mine, or any other sure-thing proposition, "just because you are a good fellow," ask time to think it over and then refuse.
Jealousy and envy are like weeds—they grow quickly and flourish on many soils but produce nothing that is not despised.
A Tennessee man writes us to tell him of a crop that will produce well on poor land. Never saw any such crop.
You cannot starve money into an animal, therefore underfeeding is a waste. Overfeeding is just as wasteful. When we overfeed we not only ruin the animal's digestive organs, but we are feeding that from which we never will get returns.
One valuable lesson the manure spreader has taught is the beneficial use of small quantities applied frequently. It makes possible what can be, but is seldom done—light application.
Swamps on the farm are like dark spots on human character. They are neglected and often misunderstood, and may be redeemed to usefulness and beauty by proper cultivation.
Thinking of buying a farm? First consult your wife, be sure you are right, then wonder why she is afraid of a small sized mortgage. This country could never have been developed without the mortgage.
We must fight the encroachment of the gullies on our hillside farms as we fight weeds. Both can be held in check and often entirely eliminated.
The man who neglects to keep all of his farm buildings insured is taking a great risk that he can afford, no matter how well off he may be.
If your neighbor succeeds where you fail, find out why. There is a reason.
Hand-Painted Hats a Fad.
Lucky these days is the woman who has skill in painting flowers. With a few tubes of color, an untrimmed hat of fine straw and a little time she can produce a confection for her head such as the less clever woman is forced to pay $50, $75, or $100 to secure, says the New York Tribune.
Hand-painted hats are one of the fads of the season, a recent fad, for the first of them were only lately imported. Those that are well done are really exquisite, and they have the advantage of requiring little trimming, for the painted flowers are enough.
The first step is to buy an untrimmed hat of some becoming style. It should be wide brimmed for long and small bunches of flowers, roses or violets or orchids, dotted at intervals over the hat, are pretty, too. On one hat just imported from France were painted bunches composed of two or three pink roses, a few leaves, and some bright blue forget-me-nots. The bunches, by the way, should not be over three inches long.
The outlining of the flowers is stenosing the design on the hat should be done that will sink in with the distinctive hue of the art, and it must be put on with a steady hand, for a wavering outline spoils the effect. The outline finished, the body color should be laid on with a flat brush as rapidly as possible.
The hat is meant to appear a monotone background for the floral decoration, and the background of the background must be one that will harmonize with the flowers. The flowers may have several colors, and may be very elaborate, but they are most effective when simple in design and broadly done, with as few colors as possible. The paints known as tapestry dyes are best for this work.
Drench, Do Not Sprinkle.
When water gets scarce throw away your watering-pot or rather your sprinkling-pot. At such a time it is a menace to the life of the flowers who are in the hands of the novice who "scatters pearly drops" upon the flowers' stalks, and gives the roots none.
Remember that when water is scarce the spade or hoe can do wonders when in the hands of the energetic person who knows how to use these tools.
Deeply dug soil retains moisture far longer than that stirred to a shallow depth.
Keep the surface soil loose and light, giving the plants a surface or dust mulch with a sharp hoe.
Mulches of all kinds are beneficial—fallen leaves, weeds pulled from the garden, lawn clippings, refuse from the barnyard.
Potted plants should be thoroughly watered so that the roots of the plant receive its share of moisture. Bedded plants, however, can exist without watering, but if you give them any, give them plenty.
The lawn should never be "sprinkled," but if possible "let" it "run on it" for hours after sunset. Unless one has an unlimited supply of water do not water the lawn, but save the water for the beds, borders and vegetable gardens.
Grove Meeting at Bryant's Pond.
Oxford Association will hold its annual grove meeting in Dearborn Grove, Bryant's Pond, Sunday, August 21st. Preaching at 11 a. m. and 2 p. m. by Rev. Dwight A. Ball and Rev. Herbert E. Benton of Connecticut. Music will be in charge of Quimby Perham.
Picnic dinner is to be provided by those who wish to come but hot coffee as usual will be furnished by the Bryant's Pond friends. Transportation by Grand Trunk trains will be convenient and a large attendance is anticipated.
Experienced travellers have found great benefit by taking with them a bottle of Dr. S. E. SNYDER'S BALSA. It cures illness caused by impure water and food.

Dust and Germs in Pianos.

After the high shelves in high closets the worst place for dirt in a well ordered house is the interior of the piano.
The piano maker when he sells a new instrument warns the purchaser to keep it not only clean, but covered when not in actual use or being aired, though he well knows that in nine houses out of ten where music is not a sacred thing his injunctions will be disregarded. A list of things taken out of the ordinary domestic piano of commerce at the periodical cleanings would hardly be believed.
Families of living mice have been found by the piano cleaner, and perhaps families of larger animals. A piano tuner found in an instrument up in a hickory nuts carried in by squirrels. The family had wondered why the instrument refused to respond to a touch of the keys.
Just plain household dust is taken out of the piano by the quart if the cleanings are not frequent, and a bacteriological analysis of piano sweepings would probably reveal the germs of several diseases. Piano tuners and cleaners catch these diseases sometimes.
Modern methods of cleaning have not been fully applied to the domestic piano and the cleaner and tuner is seen laboriously scrubbing the felt hammers to remove the thick coating of dust that soon accumulates. Piano tuners have discovered that they are more subject to colds in the head than average folk, and some have hit upon the scheme of wearing cotton in the nostrils when at work. The effect is greatly to reduce the frequency of such colds.
Normally careful housewives often wonder why their piano is so inefficient to exclude moths from the house. If they would examine the piano they would sometimes find a solution to the mystery.
Moths are attracted by the congenial gloom and abundant felt inside a piano; perhaps they are fond of music. At any rate the piano is a great breeding place for these household pests, and what the careful housewife saves in clothing she often loses in piano felt by the ravages of the moth. A long neglected piano may be so riddled by moths as to require complete renewal of destructible parts.
Mothers of growing daughters groan in spirit and stop their ears when they behold a dozen young folks gathered about a piano singing college songs and rag time music to the banging accompaniment of an unskilled player, but the resultant damage from mere rough handling is as nothing compared to the ruin wrought by dust and insects when the careless young folks go away leaving the instrument wide open for the entrance of anything with wings or legs.
Germans, who seem to have an innate respect for almost any sort of musical instrument, are shocked at the treatment given to the piano in the ordinary American household where there are children. A piano in an orderly German household will be in almost perfect condition as to both tune and cleanliness long after the piano installed in an American household at the same time is tuneless, dusty and moth riddled. The conscientious German housewife who should find the piano open on coming down in the morning would naturally suspect some member of the family of having been at the instrument all night.

Apache Craze in Paris.

It is not news to say that every other thing in Paris is called Apache. It makes little difference whether it is a dance, a dinner, a hotel, a hoodlum, a gown or a ring. The name Apache is the last thing in popularity and the fashion are making the most of it.
There are some talk of gowns for the autumn which are lavishly trimmed with fringe, made up of a narrow skirt and a hunting skirt; to precede this there is a hat called Apache, which is warrior-like to say the least, says Indianapolis News.
In a measure it is not a startling change from the Pocahontas trimmings that we wore on our hats two seasons ago. These consisted of upright feathers in different colors spread across the forehead and side of the hat. In some the Apache turbans exactly the same kind of trimming is used, only the Apache effect is made prominent by the feathers being arranged upright around the head and not on a brim of a hat.
One of the modes which is being exploited in Paris is almost a facsimile of an Indian chieftan's headdress. The feathery about eight inches long, in the form of quills at the base, curling into soft tendrils at the top. The stand close together in an even band, grading a little lower at the back than at the front.
These surround an extra high turban of chiffon or tulle draped into a mound shape, and there is a slight brim, say about an inch in depth, which forms a base for the feathers.
This is a startling hat, but as it is turned out by a great house it will probably be worn by those who can set the fashions. There is no longer any doubt that we are to wear hats that exceed in height anything that has been attempted for centuries.
While the first hat is more definitely Indian and has more of the atmosphere than any other model, it is also true that some of the other turbans are more popular because they are not so daring. There is a high crowned turban made of gauze shot through with metal and trimmed across the front with an immense bunch of plumes.
These are vari-colored, extra thick and mount fully ten inches in the air.
The head space of all these hats is small. It is the height that counts, and the more it looks like an Indian headdress the more startlingly stylish it is.
So far these Apache turbans have not been frequently seen on this side of the water, but they are coming one by one. There is no use in saying that our women are too sensible to wear them, because a statement like this becomes a monkey when one remembers the aeroplane hat, the Merry Widow and the peach basket.

Do You Get Up With a Lame Back?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.
Almost everyone knows of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because of its remarkable health restoring properties. Swamp-Root fulfills almost every wish in overcoming rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night.
Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble, it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been thoroughly tested in private practice and has proved so successful that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble.
When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Home of Swamp-Root, Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles are sold by all druggists. Don't make any mistake but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

GILEAD.

Mrs. Flora A. Burnham, widow of George Burnham, of Gilead, was buried from her home in Gilead, Monday. Mrs. Burnham was the daughter of General James Burbank and Susan Ingalls Burbank and was an own cousin of Albert Burbank of Portland.

She was born in Gilead, Oct. 22, 1823. Educated in the village schools of Gilead and the Academy of Bethel. She was married in 1840 to George Burnham of Gilead, who was for many years prominent in town affairs, holding nearly all the town offices at different times of his life, and also was representative to the Legislature.

Mrs. Burnham was one of nine children and was the only living member of her family with the exception of a sister, Mrs. Martha Wheeler of Newburyport, Mass. Although an invalid for many years, Mrs. Burnham was mentally very active up to the day of her death, and maintained a keen interest in home and community and was keenly interested in events and topics that were engaging the public attention, keeping in close touch with them through books and magazines.

The seventy years of her married life were spent in the Burnham household at Gilead, and it was from this home that she was buried with all of her six surviving children about her. Mrs. Burnham was the mother of nine children: Mellie, Percival Burnham, deceased; Putnam Burnham, deceased; Charles Albert Burnham, Bellie, N. H. May, Elizabeth Gilbert, Canton; George, Martha Imogen Burnham, Boston; Stella Flora and Fannie Luella Burnham, deceased.

BRYANT POND.
Family Reunion.
A family reunion was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Bowker, Sunday, August 14, it being the first for a space of fourteen years. Those present included Edward Stanley, wife and daughter, of Berlin, N. H.; Percy J. Bowker, of Wakefield, Mass.; Albert L. Bowker and wife of West Paris, Irving L. Bowker and wife of Portland, Elmer R. Bowker of Waterville, W. F. Bowker and wife of Portland and Mrs. Pearl Muller and two children now residing at home.

Percy H. Belyea, agent of the Portland Concrete Co., was in town last week and took two carloads more of granite from the old quarry on the William Day property.

The town team suffered defeat on the Hanover grounds, Saturday. It was an interesting game with a score of 2 to 1. Chase of the U. of M. pitched for Bryant's Pond. The Hanover club play a return game here Saturday, Sept. 3.

The arrivals last week were Mrs. Dolly Carroll, Franklin, Mass.; Grace Mountfort, Boston; Wm. G. Morton, Boston; Edwin R. Perham, Chelsea; Myrtle Bacon, Hyde Park; Charles Rankin, Mechanic Falls; Bessie Cole, South Paris.

Rev. C. D. McKenzie has finished his labors here with the Baptist society, having served as pastor for two years. Mr. McKenzie is now visiting friends in Waltham, and intends to take a much needed rest before taking up another pastorate. Rev. J. E. Cochran, state missionary, is now supplying the church here.

The V. I. S. fair last week was surely satisfactory both financially and otherwise. There was a large amount of work put into it by different individuals, and this labor with the contributions has happily brought the society out of debt. They now own the building occupied by the fire company on the ground floor, with hall above, and four acres of land just outside the village limits which is eventually to be made into a public park and play ground. This shows that something has been accomplished for this little village in improvements within the past five years.

Natural Resources.
It would seem as if we had some resources near Bryant Pond that were they known to the world at large and properly developed, would mean much to the prosperity of our town.

Bryant Pond granite is as yet unknown to the general public and yet it has entered into the construction of many fine buildings. The new G. T. station in Portland, at Yarmouth and the new station now being built at Danville contains large quantities of granite taken from the quarry below the village, besides several fine stations in the West.

Within a short distance from the road are fine ledges of granite as can be found in the hills and chances for a half dozen quarries like the Grand Trunk to be in operation. If we, as a town could make some systematic effort to interest a capitalist in these resources so that they could be developed, who could tell how much of a help it would be to this little town where we have so few industries.

Not only do we have summer resorts, but we have farms, some of them highly productive, many of them capable of producing twice what they are producing to-day, and supporting a much larger population.

Why not advertise these resources? If it pays for an individual to advertise it will pay for a town to advertise. Some may say that what is said about our resources is overdrawn, but we do not think so. Give a little sober thought to the matter. See what the citizens of other towns, perhaps not as favorably situated as ours have accomplished by just working together and letting their light shine.

Out West they build up towns where there is no excuse for one, but here at Bryant Pond we have an excuse for a prosperous and progressive village as can be found in Maine. All that can hold a town back is the petty quarrels and differences of its citizens and a tendency to sleep, rather than to alert to new ideas. Then it is up to us, as citizens of this good old town, to drop the petty jealousies and quarrels that would hold us back, and work together for a better, bigger and busier Bryant Pond.

Allen J. Hathaway is working for Ralph M. Bacon, haying.

Eva B. Andrews is taking painting lessons of Myrtle A. Bacon.

Mrs. Laura A. Buck and son, Harry B. Buck of Hyde Park, Mass., are visiting relatives in town.

The lumber has arrived for Lesmore Currier's new house and the carpenters have commenced building. Alton Bacon has charge of the work. This house is being built on a lot purchased from the William Day and the William Day house. It is understood that the farm has been divided into house lots which will be sold to parties desiring the same. There are some excellent building sites in this vicinity and as the village grows undoubtedly more new houses will be built near.

The V. I. S. fair proved very much of a success in every way and the people of our little town have every reason to feel a little pride in the work accomplished. About $175 was realized which will be used for improvement purchase. It all goes to show how much can be accomplished by the citizens when working together. The village improvement society was organized several years ago and has been a live organization from the start and the help it has given to the improvement of the town. We understand its membership is not restricted to the people of the village but that anyone interested in the welfare of Bryant Pond is welcomed as a member. And everyone in Woodstock should be interested in the prosperity of the business center. It would seem as if there would be many outside the village that could become helpful members of the society and so by all working together for the common good could make the old town boom.

Mrs. Alice H. Wornwood Reed.
The funeral of Mrs. Alice H., wife of George W. Reed of Haverhill, Mass., who died August 11, aged 36 years, was held Sunday, August 14 at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Wornwood at Oxford.

The services were conducted by Rev. Albert K. Baldwin, assisted by the choir of the Methodist church, who sang, Sleep Thy Last Sleep, Face to Face, and It is Not for Long. The interment was at East Otisfield. Mrs. Reed had an affectionate disposition and made hosts of friends, which was made manifest in her last sickness, as her room was kept filled with the flowers she loved.

She learned only last December, that she had a fatal disease and, after an unsuccessful operation, went to her parents' home where she was lovingly cared for until the end came Aug. 11.

Though she enjoyed life as few do, she never murmured or rebelled and endeavored herself to all by her patient endurance to the end. The floral offerings were exceptionally beautiful and were:

The Grand Trunk Exhibit.
Capt. J. Waldo Nash is now making up the exhibit to be sent to the Canadian National Fair at Toronto, Canada. As usual, this year's fair will be held the latter part of August. Capt. Nash is the official taxidermist for the Grand Trunk Road and always has one of the largest exhibits.

This year's exhibit will include five large mooseheads, including the monster 61 inch head recently mounted. This head is a close second to the record of 66 inches spread. There will be several heads of both buck and doe, all kinds of game birds, including many varieties of ducks and geese, and several owls. The game birds are mounted both as game, hanging and standing in life like attitude.

Prominent among the mounted fish is a specimen of the great gray trout from the Megamagui region, weighing from 25 to 37 pounds, and of the largest specimens of the Atlantic salmon, sunfish, white perch, yellow perch, snout fish, eels and white fish. A quantity of red squirrels, chipmunks and rabbit heads will also be sent.

Especially notable are several large game pieces of birds, mounted in life-like positions behind plate glass, with appropriately painted background and rustic frame. These pieces measure over 4 by 6 feet.

The whole exhibit occupies an entire car, the Grand Trunk sending for its transportation its largest baggage car.

Superintendent Norway and Waterford.
Emil P. Herms has been chosen as the new superintendent for the Norway and Waterford district. L. M. Felch having resigned the position to teach in Caribou. Mr. Herms was born in Berlin, Germany, in 1872, and received his early education in Germany. He came from there in 1882. While in Turner he attended the district school for two years and then entered Hebron Academy from which he graduated in 1892. He taught school in the different towns of Maine for nine years. Becoming more and more interested in higher education, he entered Bowdoin college from which he graduated in 1904.

For the past six years he has filled two principalships, in Washington Academy at East Machias and at Lisbon Falls, serving three years in each place. He comes here from Lisbon Falls.

Hon. Frederick W. Plaisted of Augusta Democratic nominee for Governor of Maine, will address the people of Norway and vicinity at Norway Opera House, Thursday evening, Aug. 18. Music by Lumley Band.

Mrs. W. H. Cobb of Portland is "visiting at Charles Stanton's on Fore street. It has been about twenty years since Mrs. Cobb married and went from here. She will be remembered as a girl as Lizzie Mason, and the Mason family were prominent Norway people. Her brothers, Sinclair and Charles, were Norway hardware merchants and Mrs. Cobb a successful music teacher. Her two brothers and husband, have been claimed by death since she went from our village to live elsewhere.

Parties have broken into Stephen Cummings' house twice this summer when they have been out of town for a few days' stay. Once they ransacked the house and took what money Master Stevie had out of his barn. The second time they made their visit he had had a few more cents given him and they took those and a little change they found. It was evidently money they were looking for. Would it not be a good plan when families go away and close their houses to speak to the night watchman that he may have his attention called to these special houses.

Women Who Camp Out.

Women who spend the summer, or a portion of the summer in tents vouch for the pleasure attained. This cannot be counted a privilege for the well-to-do alone, for anybody can take advantage of the opportunity for such a delightful vacation. The tent vacation is especially recommended for persons with limited incomes. The excessive heat of the summer apartments can be avoided, and new health and strength will be attained by those who try the tent outing if only two weeks.

Many of the women of the larger cities have solved the summer problem with a tempting vacation. Camping out, especially when a good location is selected for the camp, has many advantages and many pleasures. On the outskirts of the cities the vacant ground is nearly all covered with camps, and in the smaller towns the women have even taken up the idea of spending all the hot months close to nature.

A person does not have to own the land on which the camp is pitched. This can be rented for a small sum, and living in a tent is one of the cheapest ways of spending a vacation. One of the principal mistakes made is to pitch the camp in a heavy shade under the trees. This makes the location damp and unhealthy.

The tent should be pitched in such a manner that it will at least get the sun during some part of the day. Dryness is one of the first essentials of a successful camp, and the dampness is one of the evils that should be guarded against.

When the family is large it is wise to have two or more tents, and to give plenty of room and cause no crowding. One of these can be for sleeping purposes. There should also be one for cooking and another to be used as a dining room. The larger the family the more tents are required. All tents in summer should have floors. These are made of boards or a great protection. The task of making the floors is so easy that any man can accomplish it, although he is not a carpenter.

The utmost simplicity is used in tent life, and for this reason the utensils and furniture should be reduced to the least possible. This gives real comfort. Japanese paper napkins should take the place of the cloth ones, and the cheapest and thickest china should be used. Candles and oil lamps are the best for lighting purposes. Large reflectors should be arranged on these in such a manner as to give good results.

Folding canvas steamer chairs are very comfortable and satisfactory. A good-sized oil stove will give all the heat necessary for cooking. A good idea is to have a covered way from the cooking tent to the dining tent, and the former should be far enough from the latter that the heat of the fire will have no effect on the diners.

The advantages of the scheme are many, quite apart from the health and strength so obtained. It is easy for the housewife, there being no burdensome housework to attend to, no rooms filled with bric-a-brac to be swept and cleaned. A few small rugs can be placed on the floors of the tents, and these can easily be shaken out each morning. There is very little work with the exception of getting the meals.

Women, as a rule, seldom know what to take with them when they go upon a camping expedition. This is one of the points where men have the advantage of them. The kit should be condensed to the utmost simplicity. The majority of the women load themselves with things that are not needed in the least.

Camping in the back yard has its advantages also. Where the income is too small for the real summer vacation, the back yard can easily be turned into a very good camp. A summer house makes a splendid one. Sorens of bamboo and Japanese netting protect the occupants from insects. Instead of taking out the whole bedstead the springs can be laid on the floor on four wooden blocks from four to six inches high.

Awnings of unbleached cotton sheeting will keep out the rain. Camping in the back yard combines nearly all the pleasures of open-air sleeping without any of the usual camp drawbacks. Dressing and undressing can always be done in the house, and this gives the family the benefit of the bathroom. Meals can be served outdoors, on the porch or in the dining-room on wet days.

In the real camp nothing is more uncomfortable than to much baggage. A woman should take along a few things, a loose-fitting jacket with pockets, at least two skirts, a soft felt hat with a wide brim, woolen gloves, two flannel shirtwaists with collars attached, a pair of woolen stockings, two pair of cotton stockings, two changes of women underwear, half a dozen handkerchiefs, three neckties to protect the neck from the sun, a flannel wrapper, a rubber coat, a pair of knitted bed socks, and a broad-brimmed straw hat. There should be a pair of oil-tanned shoes for wear about the camp, one draw-string bag for toilet articles and a smaller one for sewing articles.

The matter of food is best left to the women of the party. They usually know what to take along, what will be the most desirable to the men, and a word should be said again here about overloading. Too much food is just as much of a burden as to many clothes. It is quite unnecessary to speak of the small things of the camp outfit, as these will easily come to the mind of the woman when she starts for preparations for the vacation. —Press and Times.

OWES HER LIFE TO

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chicago, Ill.—"I was troubled with falling and inflammation, and the doctors said I could not get well unless I had an operation. I knew I could not stand the strain of one, so I wrote to you sometime ago and you told me what to do. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier I am feeling like a new woman. Mrs. WILLIAM ARRENS, 983 W. 21st St., Chicago, Ill.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases of any similar medicine in the country. The thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every such suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

For the Good of the Parties.

My near and dear friends of the Republican and Democratic parties:
As it is now about State election time I beseech of you as one's that love's your dear country, beware of wirepullers, false prophets and wolves in sheep's clothing. Do we want men to represent us that are so selfish and two faced that even God hates them. They dare not vote for the right and true, that they are afraid they will lose a vote by it. Who very pleasantly and kind hearted just before election, but after they have got your vote they do not now you.
The parties are now so cor that they have already four parties and talk of the 5 party. Yours truly,

A Gracious "No."

There is much art in saying "No" graciously, for this small, short syllable, brusque as it naturally is, need be none the less decisive if said in a pleasant way. It is the fear of "seemingly rude" that often makes a girl hesitate to refuse a proffered kindness, though she knows quite well it would be wiser not to accept it, and sensitive people are apt to suffer tortures when conscience forces them to be thus "ungracious." But "No" can be said as pleasantly as "Yes," even on the spur of the moment, if we give ourselves the habit of expressing our thoughts politely. "You are very kind, but it would be out of the question," will take scarcely longer to say than that offhand "No, thanks!" shot out like a cannon ball. When refusing an invitation, if possible, give your reason for so doing, and do not forget under any circumstances that courtesy is always the mark of good breeding.

A New Ten Commandments.

President John M. Thomas of Middlebury college prepared 10 commandments for students and pronounced them at a recent meeting of the University convocation of the state of New York:

1. Thou shalt set the service of God and man before thine heart as the end of all thy work.
2. Thou shalt inquire of each study what it has for thee as a worker for a better world, not relinquishing thy pursuit of it until thou hast gained its profit into this end.
3. Thou shalt love the truth and only the truth, and welcome all truth gladly, whether it bring thee or the world joy or suffering, pleasure or hardship, ease or toil.
4. Thou shalt meet each task at the moment assigned for it with a willing heart.
5. Thou shalt work each day to the limit of thy strength consistently with the yet harder work which shall be thy duty on the morrow.

6. Thou shalt respect the rights and pleasures of others, claiming no privilege for thyself but the privilege of service, and allowing thyself no joy which does not increase the joy of thy fellow-men.
7. Thou shalt love thy friends more than thyself, the college more than thy friends, thy country more than thy college, and God more than all else.
8. Thou shalt rejoice in the excellencies of others, and despite all rewards saving the gratitude of thy fellows and the approval of God.
9. Thou shalt live by thy best, holding thyself relentlessly to those ideals thou dost most admire in other men.
10. Thou shalt make for thyself commandments harder than another can make for thee, and each new day commandments more rigorous than thine own laws of the day before.

Dirt And Flies.

Attention should be called to the question of dirt, dust, and flies in their relation to food and the public health. It is a common thing to see sidewalk displays of fruits, berries, vegetables, meats, fish, etc., entirely unprotected from the clouds of dust blowing up and down the streets, but the dust, however germ laden it may be, is innocuous if itself in comparison to the flies that come directly from the stable, the hog pen, or the open closet and swarm over the food thus exposed for sale.

The common house fly, now known as the typhoid fly, breeds chiefly in fresh horse manure, and shows a decided preference for that which is wet and sloppy. It is also known to breed in human excrement, barn yard refuse, and other filth. The eggs hatch within 24 hours after egg laying, the maggots usually attaining full growth within a week, when they transform to pupae remaining in this stage 3 to 7 days, and then emerge as full grown flies.

The adult flies feed greedily upon all kinds of animals, swarm around sputum and excreta of persons afflicted with loathsome and dangerous diseases, and then, whenever a chance offers, crawl eagerly over food, oftentimes leaving behind a trail of sickness and death. These are facts demonstrated beyond dispute.

In order to avoid such contamination the conditions surrounding all places where food is prepared or dispensed should be kept as clean as it is possible to make them.

Experiments have shown that flies usually will not lay eggs in dark places, neither will maggots develop if the material in which they are found becomes too dry, hence if the manure be drawn out and spread at frequent intervals in accordance with best agricultural practice, or stored in dirt or fly proof cellars, the development will be prevented.

The relatively cheap cement underpinning makes it comparatively easy to construct dark cellars, places where manure and other fly-breeding material can be kept without producing swarms of flies.

No open closets, open garbage cans, or other avoidable breeding places for flies should be allowed near.

All doors or windows or other openings should be effectively screened.

All food products exposed for sale that are not afterwards cooked before being eaten should be protected from dust and flies. Meat carried by the itinerant meat-vender, and exposed in the open, attracts not only the germ laden house fly but blowflies, which deposit their eggs in the meat, which if the meat be thoroughly cooked afterwards the maggots in themselves are not dangerous to health, though their presence in the food is anything but inviting.

The distribution of unprotected bread and pastry from the open shelves of carts driven through the dusty streets, the handling of these products by the driver who has his hands in the dirt, spitting horse and the dirty, greasy harness, is a practice which could be easily improved by having all such material wrapped in paper before leaving the bakery.

The proprietors of places where food is either prepared or dispensed should without question see that the above conditions are maintained.

Each customer should insist that the dealer from whom food supplies are purchased maintain the above sanitary conditions.

Stock on the Potato Farm.

In Some Seasons Feeding Is More Profitable Than Selling the Tubers.

The season just passed has served well to illustrate the value of some kind of livestock on the potato farm. With an overstocked spring market and a large supply in growers' hands, it has been impossible to find a ready sale at any price. While most growers have sold what they could at prices ranging from 15 to 25 cents a bushel, it has been impossible to place them all, even at these low prices. The man who has run almost wholly to potatoes has had to lose many bushels unless he has been within reasonable distance of a starch factory, where he may have sold some at about their feeding value on the farm.

But the man who has a good farm stock, especially cows, has had a market for most or all of his surplus at home, where the returns have been as good as the market has netted shippers in many instances.

I do not think it profitable to grow potatoes especially for feeding purposes, but they are good food for all farm animals and are especially valuable for cows in milk.

The man who is running a dairy and making the potato crop his chief money crop has an advantage over the one who depends wholly or in a large part on the potato for the most of his income.

On most Eastern farms that have been long under cultivation the one great need is for more frequent ploughing and more fertility and more humus. The farm manure furnishes the last of the trio in the best possible form, and also the fertility at less cost than it can be bought in the markets. With the stock to furnish manure for one dressing of the fields in each period of crop rotation, whether it be one of three or five years, it is much easier and more profitable to keep up the humus and fertility of the soil.

Much might be said in favor of the cows along this line of thought, but as it is in connection with potato growing that I am now advocating the cow I will not go too much into the details of dairy farming as a business. It is a fact that years like the last will come again, perhaps more often than not, when the farmer cannot use all the potatoes that have been produced.

What shall we do with the unsalable part of the crop in such years of plenty? One would not advise the building of many more starch factories, as there is not an unlimited demand for starch, and the price is now as low as it can be manufactured at a profit. The only safe conclusion is that we must be prepared to use up the crop at home when it cannot be sold at a profit and thus avoid a total loss.

What is a bushel of potatoes worth as food for milk cows? I do not know. It depends on the price of the cow's product.

But I do know from my own experience that they are relished by the cows and that they increase the flow of milk and the cream yield. I certainly would not think of selling potatoes from the farm at 15 to 20 cents a bushel as long as the cows could use them to good advantage.

Again, the pig is the natural sequence of the cow where cream or butter is sold, and potatoes are an excellent food for growing pigs and mature brood sows. I personally know of one man who says and he is considered truthful, that he wintered five or six brood sows almost wholly on potatoes and they did well and farrowed large litters of pigs, which were sold at wholesale for $4 each for the lot when four weeks old. That sounds like good business. With out the hogs the potatoes would not have turned him any thing, in this line of stock raising.

I am coming more and more to believe that some form of stock husbandry must lie at the foundation of our Eastern agriculture. While there are chances for success along special lines in special locations, stock husbandry, especially dairying, combined with some special money crop to which the farm succeeds on most of our farms. Hence, the man whose money crop is potatoes should have all the good stock of some kind his farm will carry, or, what amounts to the same thing, that the available working force can care for.

I am not advocating the growing of potatoes as a specialty, but I am advocating the cow, or other farm animals, for the man who is a potato grower, and will be found in only one safe method to make the business profitable in the long run. —[N. Y. Tribune Farmer.]

Prof. L. O. Emerson.

The following sketch of a well known musician, who is a native of Parsonsfield, will be read with interest. He is a member of an old family and the attainment of great age seems rather characteristic of his people. Professor Emerson is a resident of Massachusetts, where he has lived for many years. The sketch is as follows:

At his home, 182 Fairmount avenue, Hyde Park, Mass., Professor Luther O. Emerson celebrated August 5, his 90th birthday. In the morning he was the recipient of many telegrams of congratulation.

In the evening a family gathering was held and among those assembled were his five children, two of his grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

Mr. Emerson's hale and hearty condition was testified to when he sang in a clear and mellow voice. Although extremely deaf, he is exceedingly cheerful, and looked after his guests' comfort continually. During the musical program Mr. Emerson sang a duet, "Flow Gently, Deva." When asked what his favorite hymn was he declared that he could not make a selection, but that his favorites were "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," "Nearer, My God, to Thee," "Just as I Am" and "Rock of Ages."

Born at Parsonsfield, of a family talented in music, it was natural for him to devote his spare time to the study of music and devour eagerly all the musical lore available. He attended Draus academy, and after leaving this institution took up the systematic study of voice and harmony, J. B. Woodbury being his tutor.

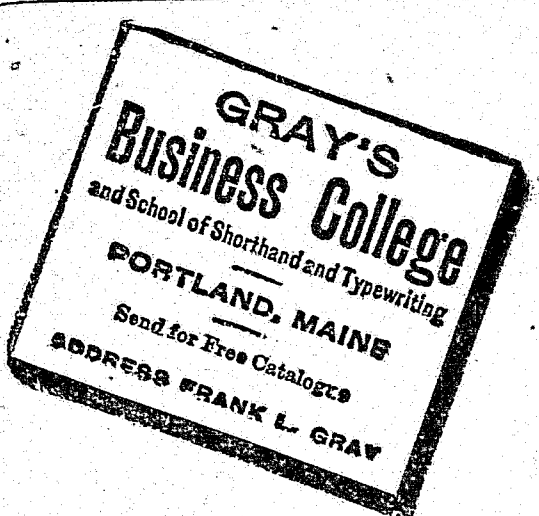

He had charge of a choir in Salem and at the age of 22 he had come to compose music, his first effort being "A Nest Among the Graves." "The Golden Wreath," a collection of songs for school room use, was completed in 1856, some 350,000 copies selling, being the largest sale of any of his works, according to Mr. Emerson. He has published 72 collections of music, comprising the greater part of his compositions.

He married Mary Grove, also a musician, in 1847, and the parents' talent is inherited in a measure by their six children, his daughter having composed several songs and music books.

It is appalling how easily slander may be started. A mere hint, a meaning look, a shrug of the shoulders, a simple question, may, a significant smile, is often the beginning of what in the end is a mortal wound to an innocent person. Someone expresses an unfavorable opinion. The rumormongers have not been repeated three times before it has assumed the dignity of a fact and a problem. A dozen plausible circumstances giving color to it are soon attached, and so it rolls through Babbalanza, getting larger all the time, and before Truth can get her shoes on the injury is done beyond redress.
